An Experiment

- I'm using an iPad to do a presentation using Airplay to an Apple TV hooked up via HDMI to the projector
- While I'm presenting on the iPad:
  - I can see the next slide or animation
  - I can also draw on the screen if I wish
  - Or just make a pointer
- I could also do the same thing with my iPhone (Maybe next time?)
- Wish me luck!!

Apple News

- El Capitan will lock down OS/X to make it even harder for malware.
  - For example in Disk Utility: Repair disk permissions is gone!
  - OS X 10.11 automatically repairs permissions during software updates, and permissions won't be allowed to be changed at other times—thus, they won't need to be repaired.
- Apple announced financial results for the third fiscal quarter. For the quarter, Apple posted revenue of $49.6 billion and profit of $10.7 billion, compared to revenue of $37.4 billion and profit of $7.7 billion in the year-ago quarter.

Apple News

- The biggest issue with the new 12-inch MacBook, is that it has only a single USB-C port.
- A startup has designed adapters that will allow you to plug in all your peripherals and then gradually cut back as you move to a more wireless future.
- The Cusby Building Blocks plug into a USB-C port with each offering a more traditional plug-in, like the current standard USB port, another with an HDMI video-audio port or another with an extra USB-C port.

New iPods

- Apple announced new models of the iPod shuffle, iPod nano, and iPod touch on July 15.
- The refresh includes new darker pink and blue, as well as a gold color option for all three iPod models.
- While the iPod Nano and Shuffle remain the same on the inside, Apple made a major overhaul of the iPod touch.
- The new Touch now features a new 64-bit processor chip for faster operation and better graphics for gaming. The device has also been upgraded to include an 8-megapixel camera, bringing it on par with the iPhone 6 and iPad Air 2.
- The refreshed iPod touch also includes A8 chip and M8 motion coprocessor from the iPhone, allowing the device to monitor your fitness and steps while also tracking your elevation.
- The new 128GB model, priced at $399. Other options include the 16GB iPod touch for $199, 32GB model for $249, and a $299 model with 64GB of space.

iOS Scam

- There is an iOS scam where a popup in Safari on your iPhone or iPad claims that iOS has crashed and that you need to phone a helpline for a fix? Here's how to fix it:
  - Put your iPhone or iPad into Airplane Mode (go into Settings and toggle the Airplane Mode switch into the off position).
  - Go to Settings > Safari and tap Clear History and Website Data.
  - Close Safari (double-press the Home button and swipe Safari up to close).
  - Exit Airplane Mode. Then restart Safari.
- To reduce the risk of this sort of issue from happening in the future you can block popups (go to Settings > Safari and toggle the Block Pop-ups switch).

A Word on Passwords

Passwords

- Passwords are used to keep unauthorized users from accessing your data or devices. Unauthorized Users = People without your password
- So… if you forget or loose your password, you become an unauthorized user
- Therefore, make sure you write down your passwords in a safe place
- And, remember that even though you might have fingerprint recognition on an iDevice, you need to enter your passcode after any upgrade or reboot
- Also keep your passwords hard to guess, but not so hard that you can't remember it or type it in successfully
- One more thing: Think about who would need your passwords if anything happened to you.

Question

- I need a backup site outside my house.
- I've considered getting a safe deposit box.
- Apple trainer suggested using iCloud Drive instead.
- It would cost me $3.99 per month, I currently pay $.99 per month for Cloud storage.
- I already have a hard drive backup at home.
- Also wondering if Cloud storage means I have to store less on my devices, particularly iPad which is just 16 capacity.
- Is there anything that should not be stored in the Cloud?
- I would appreciate it if you would answer these questions at the meeting and provide pros and cons about using Cloud storage.

Backups

Backups

- Backups are basically copies that can be used if something happens to the original version
- Examples of items to backup: Documents, Pictures, Music, Software, Mail, Contacts, Bookmarks, Books, Events, Applications, etc…
- Some items are easily reconstructed and don't necessarily need to be backed up. (Music or Apps purchased from Apple could be re-downloaded)
- However even in these cases backups can save you a lot of time restoring your data.
- Data can be lost for a variety of reasons

Potential Causes of Data Loss

- Hardware failure (Hard drive)
- Hardware Loss or damage (water damage)
- Equipment theft or misplacement
- User error (accidental deletion)
- Software problems (upgrade failures, data corruption)
- Catastrophic damage (flood, fire)
- Password issues

Backups

- Your backup copy should not be subject to the same failure at the original source
  - Should not be on the same hard drive
  - Maybe not in the same location
- Think through the possible causes of data loss. Are you protected?
- How often do you need to backup? It depends: You are at risk to lose everything created/modified since your last backup.

Time Machine Backups

- My opinion Time Machine is the best backup software ever
- Backs up up every hour and only backs up the data that has changed
- Manages space on backup disk by deleting old backups as needed
- Easy to restore files or your entire machine
- Free software on every Mac
- Only disadvantage is that your Time Machine Backup could be subject to the same loss as your original (Theft, Fire, Flood, etc…)
- You can backup to multiple disks and keep one of the disks at another location (Safe Deposit Box, relatives house, etc…

iOS Backups

- iOS devices have their own backup software that can be used to restore a device or set up a new device
- Backups can be directed to the cloud, but you have to buy additional storage if you exceed 5GB.
- iOS can also back up to any computer that you own that runs iTunes
- You can do both: backup to the cloud and backup using iTunes if you wish

Cloud Backups

- Copying or syncing your data to a cloud based service like: iCloud Drive, Google Drive, DropBox, OneDrive, Flickr, etc…
- Provides off-sites storage for your most important data, but generally does not back up everything like Time Machine
- You can manually copy data or set up syncing between your hard drive and the cloud drive
- If you use an automatic syncing services, be aware that if you accidentally delete a photo, it will be automatically deleted from all devices as well as the cloud
- Also just be aware that you are relying on a vendor to not lose your data.

Cloud Backups

- Does Cloud storage means I have to store less on my devices?
  - Generally no. You must maintain at least one duplicate copies
  - Remember data that is synced can be deleted everywhere with one accident
  - Cloud data can also be lost, although this is less probable
- Is there anything that should not be stored in the Cloud?
  - This depends on how much you trust your service. There's many high profile examples where companies have been hacked.
  - You could encrypt or password protect highly confidential files before they are stored on the cloud.

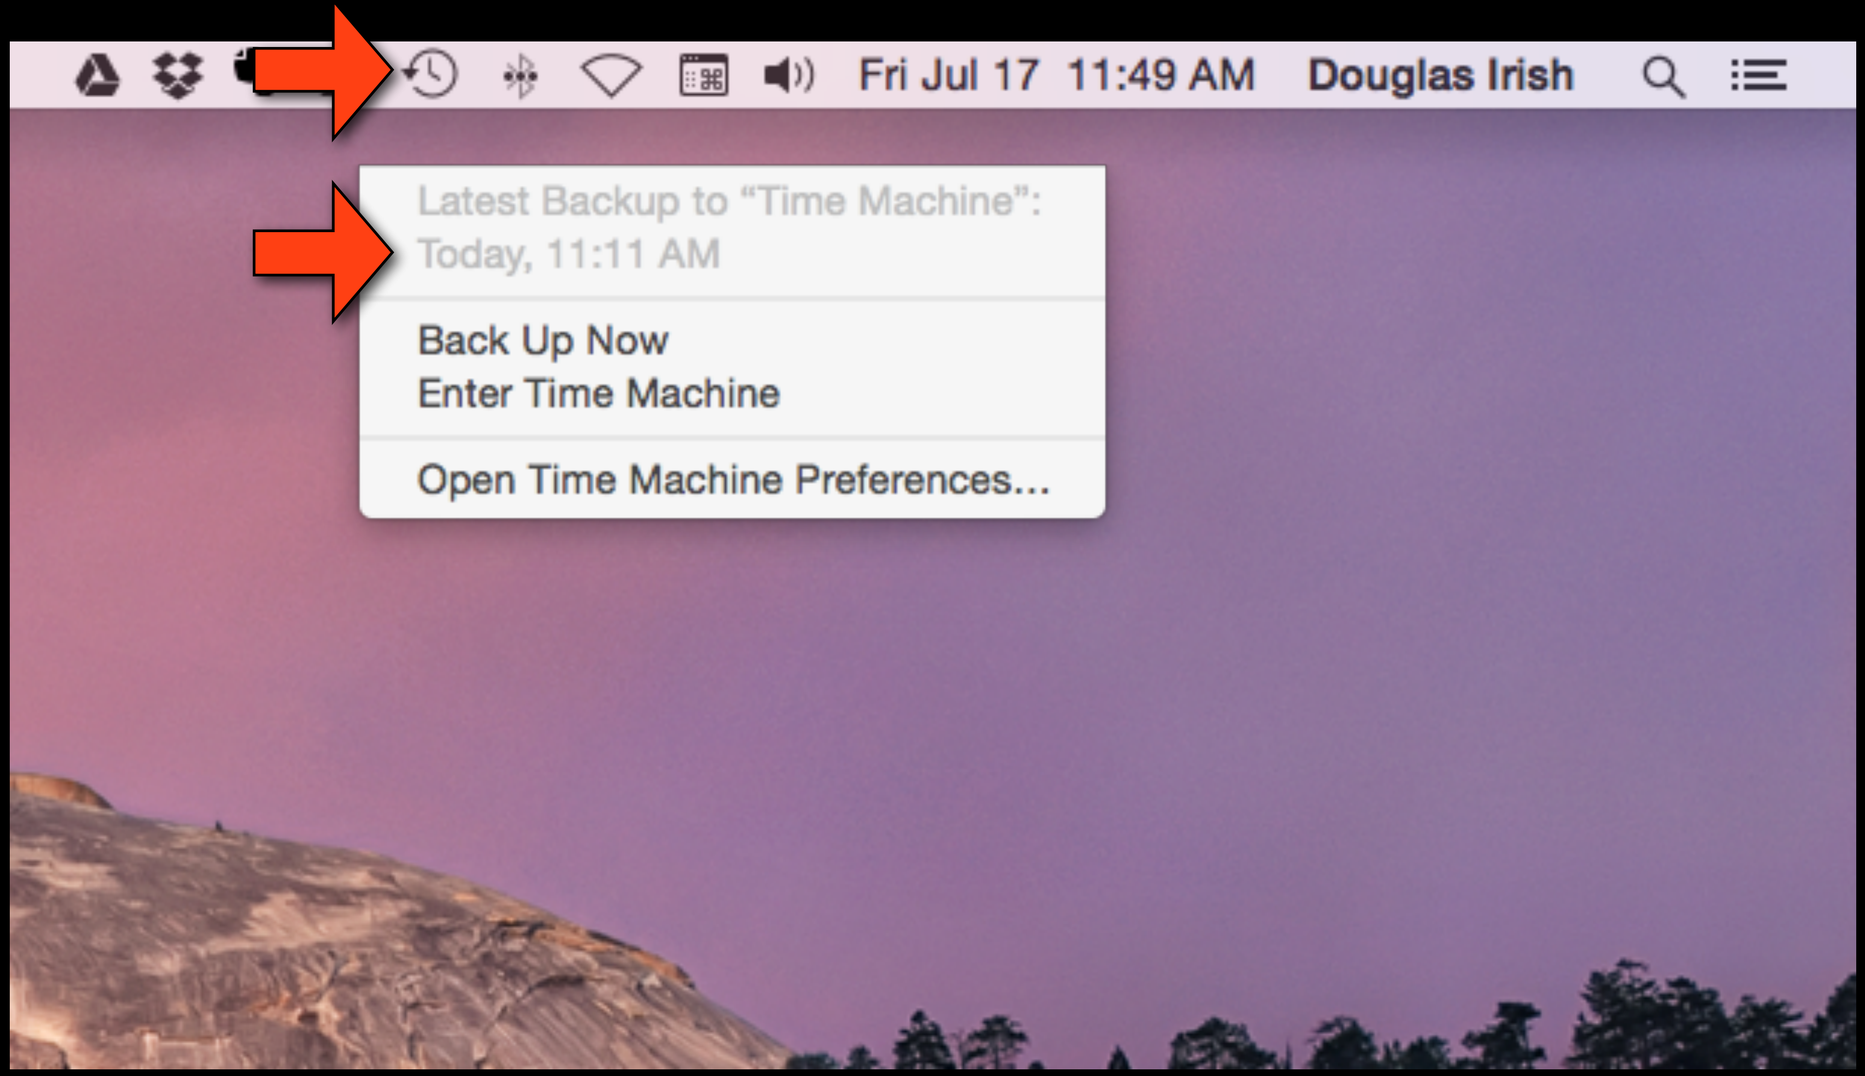
Web Based Backups

- Are services that back up your machine like Time Machine, but instead of backing up to a hard drive, it backs up to a drive on the internet.
- Carbonite is one well known example
- You pay so much a year for the service (Carbonite is $48/year)
- Backups run in the background
- Due to network speeds, restorations may take a long time

Backup Suggestions

- Check that your backups are running
- Your backup is no good unless you can restore it. Don't wait until it's necessary to figure out how to do a restore.
- Create some dummy data, back it up, then delete it, and see if you can restore it.
- Any backup strategy is a balance of cost/effort vs risk.
  - Could two copies fail at the same time? Yes.
  - Is it likely? No
  - However is some cases this risk is so big you might want more than one copy (Think financial institutions)

Checking Time Machine Backups



Question

- There is a lot of talk about Adobe Flash-can you revisit that?

Adobe Flash

- Adobe Flash is a software platform that runs video, animation, and games inside of Web pages.
- Flash was the standard for Web video, especially after YouTube began using it in 2005.
- But now it's becoming obsolete, as most Web sites and apps use different technologies for the same purpose.
- Thank you Steve Jobs and the decision not to have Flash on the iPad

The Problem w/Flash

- Flash has been one of the biggest attack methods of choice for cybercrooks and hackers. Security vulnerabilities turn up on an almost daily basis.
- Just this month, Adobe put out security alerts and fixes for 38 vulnerabilities in Flash Player.
- Last week, it came out that a company called Hacking Team had been using previously unknown flaws in Flash to create spyware that it sold to oppressive governments in countries such as Sudan and Saudi Arabia.
- Flash also uses up a lot of computing resources and can bog systems down. "We know firsthand that Flash is the number one reason Macs crash," - Steve Jobs, April 2010.

Adobe Flash

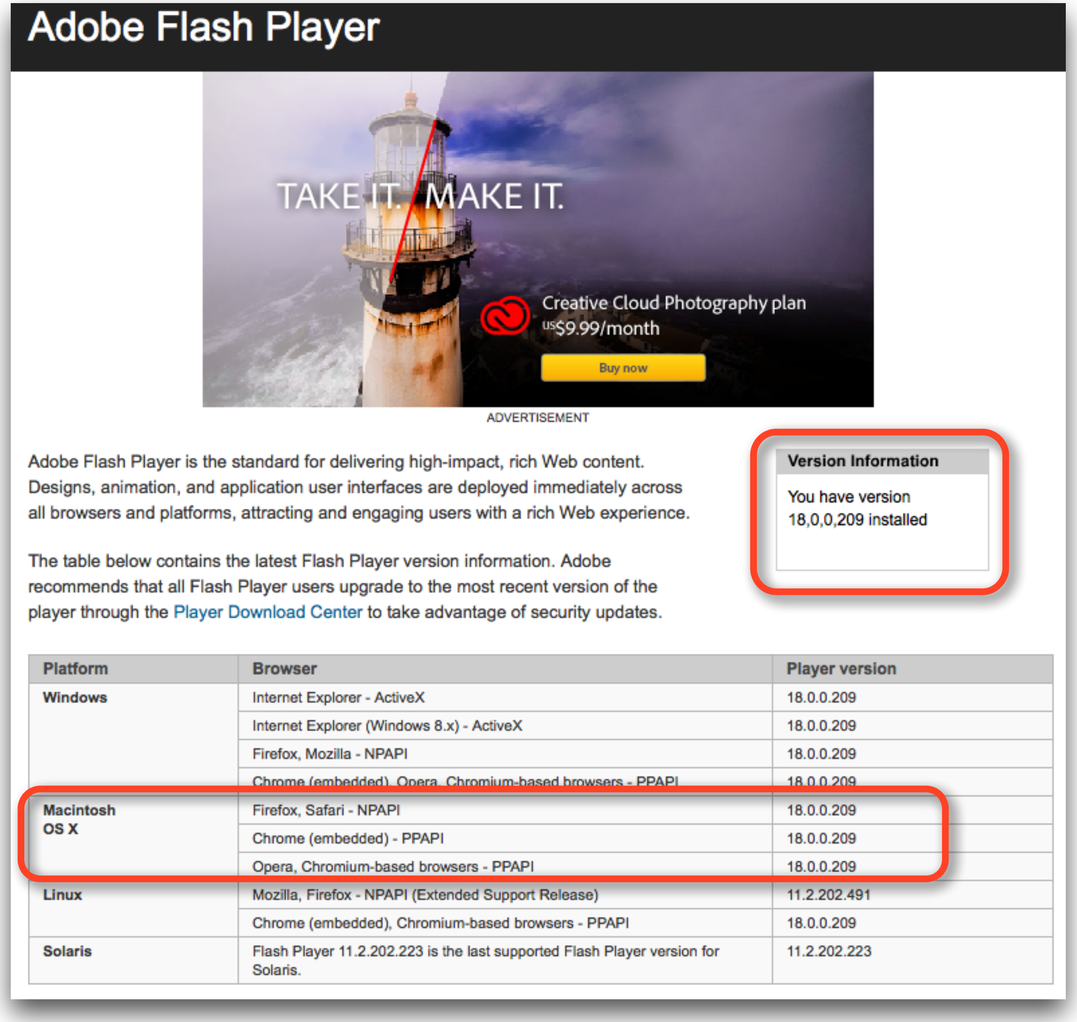
- In October 2010, Apple announced that it would no longer install Flash Player on its computers including its Safari Web browser (although users could install it on their own if they want to)
- Apple will block Flash in Safari if it's too far out of date or if a version is determined to be dangerous
- Apple completely banned Flash from its mobile devices running the iOS operating system, such as the iPhone, iPad, and Apple Watch.

Adobe Flash

- Apple's rejection of Flash helped spur Web and software developers to use other technologies for delivering video or animating games.
- This month, the latest version of Firefox blocked Flash (though after an update by Adobe, Mozilla has re-enabled use of the plugin in its browser).
- Google's Chrome browser comes with Flash, but it is disabled by default.

Adobe Flash

- You can go to this website to see if you have flash installed and if it's up to date
- www.adobe.com/software/flash/about/



Adobe Flash

- Do I need it on my computer? Generally not.
- Most websites have switched over to another video format, called HTML 5. It's the default on both YouTube and Vimeo, for example. So unless you know you need Flash for a specific site, it's best to uninstall it or block it.
- However, if a website requires Flash to display videos or animation, you will need to install Flash to watch it.
- It's typical for Flash-based sites to display alerts when they detect that Flash is not installed.
- If you see this and you absolutely must view that video download, install Flash directly from Adobe.com, as fake installation popups that lead to spyware are an age-old trick employed by untrustworthy websites.

Adobe Flash

- Uninstalling Flash: Go to the following Web site for directions
- https://helpx.adobe.com/flash-player/kb/uninstall-flash-player-mac-os.html
- To Block Flash: go to Safari Preferences,

Packing Pro

- Very easy to add items to the catalog
- You can create a list from an old list. So on the next cruise you take, just pull up the last cruise.
- You can share your list with others that own the app
- We found it very useful and worth the $3.
- There is a free version as well.

From the Tips App

Smart Mailboxes iOS

- In your iOS mail app, you can add several smart mailboxes that are hidden by default.
- Just go to the mailbox list and tap “Edit”
- Then select the mailboxes you wish to show.
- “Unread” just shows the mail you haven’t read yet
- “Attachments” show mail with attachments. This is good for deleting mail that takes the most space.
- “Today” shows just the mail that has arrived today
